

THURSDAY EVENING, JAN. 18, 1891.

SENATOR LODGE, of Massachusetts, the putative author of the Force bill, and a protectionist of the most pronounced stripe, says the republican Senators from his section "will vote for free coal every time." Why, of course they will. The new tariff bill protects the manufacturers of their States to the enormous extent of $4 on every $10 worth of their products, and free coal will add still more to their profits. What is consistency to them, or they to consistency, when profit is in view? But with this plain case before them, why should southern Senators stand so perpendicular for free trade that they lean over towards protection for the rich North, at the expense of their own | ered his resignation to-day, assigning, as poor States? Free trade is the best, and a revenue tariff the next, but common sense protests against a tariff that restricts revenue from northern, and utterly abolishes it from southern products, and southern common sense revolts at a forty per cent. protection on northern manufactures, while the coal of the South must compete with that of all the rest of the world on equal terms.

FROM WASHINGTON.

[Correspondence of the Alexandria Gazette] WASHINGTON, Jan. 18, 1894.

Congressmen Oates of Alabama, when the coal schedule of the tariff bill shall be reached in the House, will propose an amendment fixing the duty on soft coal at fifty cents a ton. All the Alabama members, all but one of those from Virginia, some from Tennessee, all from Louisiana, and some others, how many is unknown, will support it; but, judging by the attempts that have been made to amend the bill in other particulars, its adoption is not likely. A stronger effort will be made to put a revenue tariff on coal when the bill shall reach the Senate. Senators Faulkner and Daniel say there are enough democrats in the body of which they are members to secure success with republican help, but of that they are uncertain. That they should not base any hope on such help, was made plain soon afterwards, when Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts, told the GAZETTE'S correspondent that the republicans would vote for free coal every time, as it was not their business to im prove democratic bills. The race horse men here say if the laws of Virginia be so amended as to allow pool selling at the race tracks only, the Driving Park near Alexandria will be bought, enlarged, put in excellent condition, and permanent employment be given to many Alexandrians.

In the House yesterday Congressman Jones of the first Virginia district introduced a bill to give $2,000 to J. M. Barrett of his district, an employee at the government medical museum, for damages received by a chemical explosion there last year, by which his hands were burned.

Mr. Meredith has introduced in the House a petition of Alfred Payne, executor of Silas K. Payne, deceased, praying that his claim be referred to the Court of Claims.

The discussion of the tariff bill under the five minutes rule will continue in the House until and including Saturday the 27 inst, night sessions being held, at which hour speeches may be made by gentlemen desiring to go on record. When the bill is reported to the House on Monday the 29th instant, Mr. Reed will speak for an hour, followed by Speaker Crisp for the same period When the tariff bill is out of the House a member of the Committee on Rules to day said he believed the first thing the House would take up would be the

As the detectives could not make up their minds whether the prisoner's name was

A FAVORED TOWN .- The Richmond correspondent of the Alexandria Ga-ZETTE writes:

"The 8th district probably furnishes more leading men in the legislature than any other one district in the State, and now that the speaker of the house Mr. Cardwell, has been elected to the Supreme bench, it is almost certain that the next speaker will be from the Eight. That person is Mr. Ryan, of Loudoun, who has been in the house for ten years and is at the head of the committee on roads and internal navigation and the second member of the committee on finance."

Yes, it does look as if the Eighth dis trict was the earth, and we may add, the little town of Warrenton is the Eighth district when it comes to a division of spoils.

That ambitious town is the home of a United States senator, an attorney general, a judge of the Supreme court, a revenue collector, a judge of New Mexco, and other officials whose "entitlements" escape us at this moment, to say nothing of the army of clerks it in the department at Washington.

Warrenton evidently understands practical politics, and when one of her citizens is selected for an office, the whole town goes for him -not to pick him to pieces, as is done in some other towns, but to put him in the desired office.—Danville Register.

THE DEFEAT OF JUDGE TURNER.-A Rich mond correspondent writes: "The defeat of Judge Turver in the 12th district was accomplished under circumstances very differ ent from those that caused Judge Hill to be retired. No one brought any charge against Judge Turner. He has been on the bench twenty-three years, and is said to be as able and as upright a judge as there is in Virginia The secret of his defeat is that Mr. Harrison is a member of the State Senate and received is a member of the State Senate and received many votes on purely personal grounds. He is well qualified for the place, and no one de-nies his fitness for it; but there is a touch of regret about his election, when one comes to realize that in order to make it possible, it was necessarry to turn out of office a gentleman who has been an ornament to the bench and so long in the service of his State. All of the judges nominated Tuesday night were elected by the Legislature yesterday. A letter from Clarke to this office says

Immediately after adjournment of the Senate the committee on roads of that body, of which Dr. Barnesis chairman, met and considered the measure. The committee agreed to report it without amendments. Copies of the bill were some days ago furnished some members of the two road committees, so they were familiar with its provisions. The measure will meet with opposition, how much it is difficult to say.

The following resolution was offered by Senator Stubbs and, on motion of Senator Echols, was referred without action to the committee on privileges and elections: Resolved by the Senate, that the committee on privileges and elections be instructed to examine and report by bill or otherwise the propriety of amending the election laws of Virginia by abolishing the electoral boards and conferring on the county courts the duties now imposed on said

When the local option bill came up on its engrossment, Mr. Jones, of Highland, moved that it be passed by. Mr. Echols, of Staunton, wanted to

Mr. Ryan presided over the session of the House to-day and just before adjournment he introduced a bill providing a new charter for the Richmond and Danville Railroad and authorizing it to consolidate with other lines. The measure is substantially the same as that passed at the last session, enlarging the powers of the Washington and Ohio road. This measure is likely to attract much attention.

Among the bills introduced were the following:

To pay John Scott, late Common-United States circuit court; to require the payment of a license by guaranty. trust, indemnity, fidelity or other company having for their purpose, or one of their purposes, to become security for the faithful performance of any duty, trust, contract, bond or agree-ment, public or private, official or otherwise; allowing two years for the recovery of land, or its value, conveyed under certain circumstances, under mistake of fact, and for other purposes: hought that Rev. Dr. Newton, of this to amend the code as to when it is necessary to prove the negligence of a railroad company; to encourage the oyster industry of the Commonwealth; to remove the political disabilities of Jefferson Wallace and Charles M. Wallace, jr., incurred under the anti-dueling act: person is injured on any part of a railroad track not enclosed as required by chapter 52 of the code.

Mr. Crump (by request) introduced a bill to suppress drunkenness. The measure is understood to embody the views of Dr. W. W. Parker as to what legislation is necessary to lessen the amount of drunkenness. It provides for light punishment for the first offense, and the penalty is increased for repeated offenses.

The House passed the Senate bill to incorporate the Fredericksburg and Lancaster Railroad Company.

The attorney general, in reply to a resolution requesting him to whether there was anything in the railroad law passed at the last session to prevent railroads from furnishing members with free passes, in a communication to the House said that the section of the act in relation to this subject was valid and constitutional, and railroads could not lawfully grant passes to legislators under it. The free passes to legislators under it. bill is still pending in the House.
